

MPAD 2001 Week 8 Activity: Activity Book Annotated Wireframe

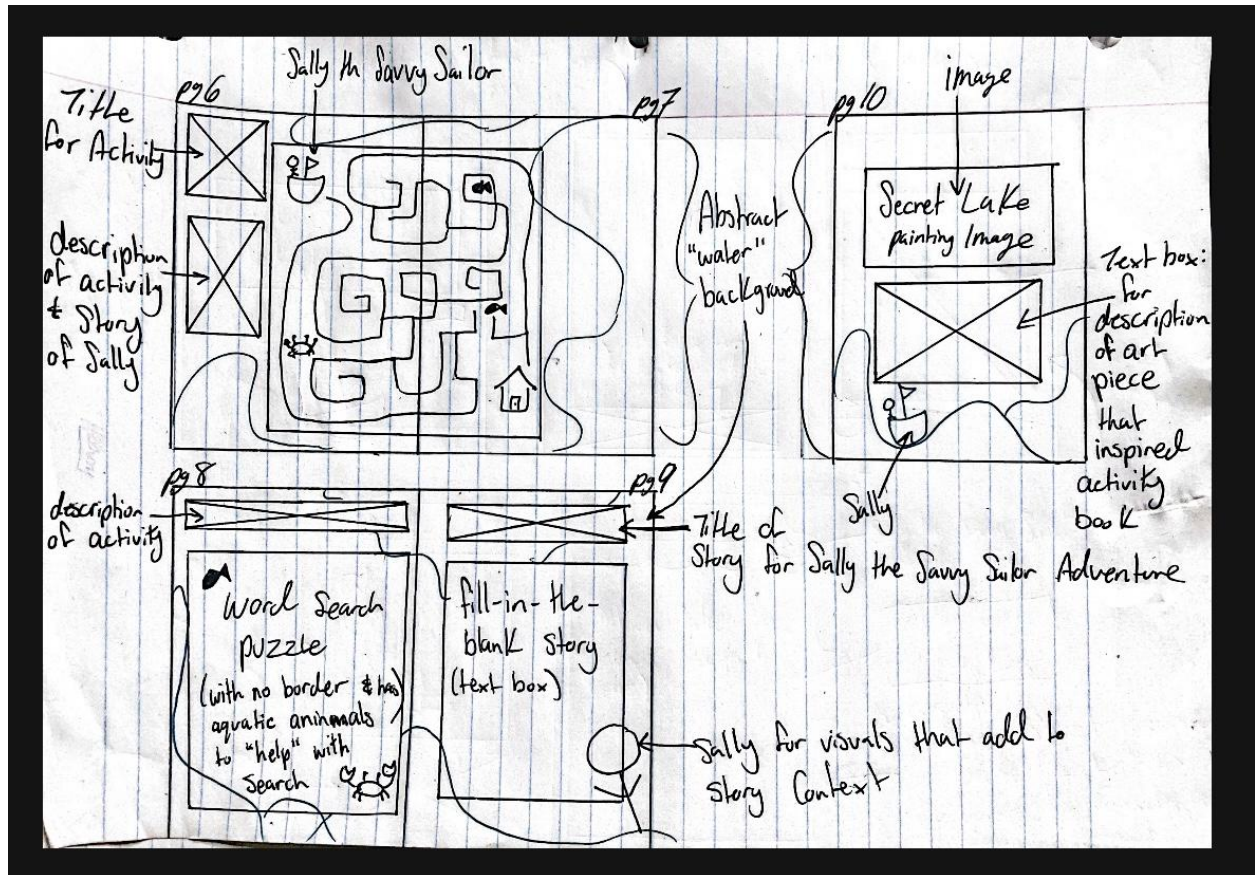

Nadja Radakovic

Art piece: Secret Lake by Alfred Manessier

Wireframe:

Cover & pages 1-5:

Story, Purpose and Activities

As this activity book is designed for the approximate age range of 6-8 year olds, children around this stage have gained solid skills in their reading capabilities and have the ability to write basic sentences with an understanding of their meaning to a story. With this in mind, for my activity book, based on the Secret Lake art piece by Alfred Manessier, it will focus on having children experience the wonders of bodies of water as Manessier did. At the same time there is an educational aspect of the activity book where readers will learn how to treat nature, and practice their reading/writing abilities.

To begin the story, readers are introduced to the cover of the activity book based off of a personal rendition of The Secret Lakes art piece, the inspiration behind this entire activity book, with our soon to be introduced main character Sally the Savvy Sailor. For the rendition, I used similar shapes to simulate water and reflection as Manessier did in his art piece. Next, readers transition onto the first activity where they are prompted to design with paint (provided with the activity book), markers, crayons, anything they can use to create an art piece themselves of an experience they had in nature that included water. This activity attempts to draw out personal and impactful experiences similar to that which Manessier had when experiencing Ottawa's lakes and rivers.

Next, readers are given the chance to learn a little bit about basic lake and river ecosystems with activity #2 where they have to sort through plant, animal and trash stickers to see what belongs in the lakes and rivers Sally the Savvy Sailor sails through for her journey.

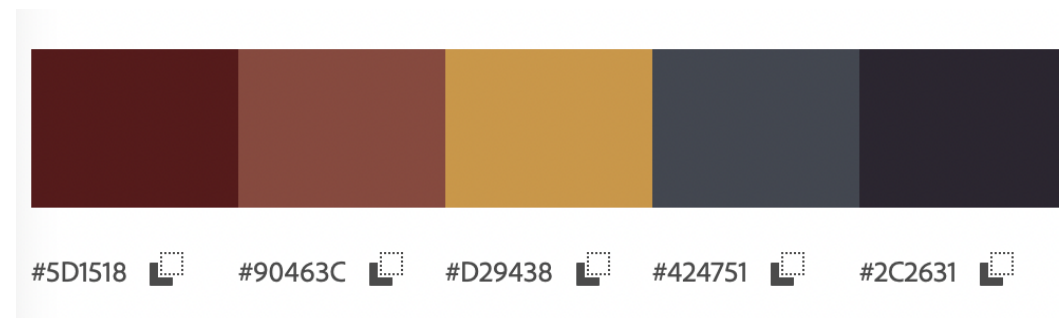

The third activity is a maze where readers will have to guide Sally the Savvy Sailor through different water routes, avoiding obstacles to guide her home.

The last activity for this activity book wraps up Sally's adventure by having the readers find words within a word cross to then complete the fill-in-a-blank story of the adventure she had traveling through the water of activity #3.

The final page of this activity book includes an image of the art piece, Secret Lake, that inspired Sally's story and experience with water, as well as a brief description of the art piece itself.

Styles

The colour scheme will draw from colours already within the art piece to continue a consistent theme with the art piece. I have chosen a triad colour theme as I feel it best compliments each other and covers a wide range of colour choices:

Inspirations from other activity books

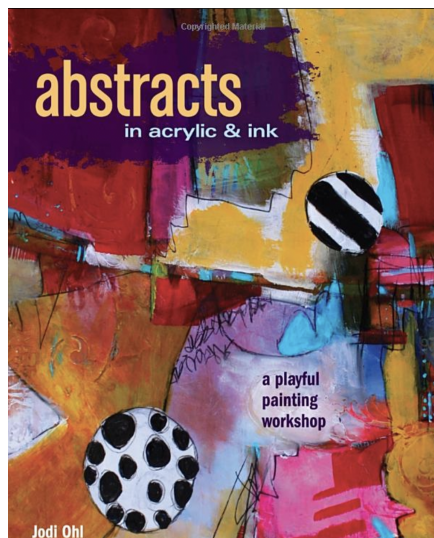

“Strange Planet” Activity Book

The inspiration I drew from here was the typography and the consistent border throughout the book.

The typography gives off a handwritten, child like theme to the book, perfect for the target audience of my activities. The consistent border found on some of the pages helps tie in a continuous theme throughout the book and is a technique I will be implementing on my own.

“Abstract In Acrylic and Ink” Activity Book

My main inspiration from this activity book comes from the cover art for the book. For my activity book cover, I am doing a rendition of Manessier’s abstract concept of water and using similar themes throughout for the background for almost every page.